The PlayStation 3 version will ship to stores next week, a few days after the other versions go on sale. The game's back story went like this: the chief villain of a previous GTA IV segment, Two Tails, informs the player that the mob-related events that are depicted in the game happened in real life. He explains how the events unfolded and how the people involved got caught. The player finds himself in a similar situation to what happened in the game and is then tasked with investigating the crime. Rockstar is still keeping the actual truth about what actually happened under wraps. One thing is for certain though: the game will be longer than the last version, with a length of approximately 15 hours in total. Two new vehicles are going to be available in the game: the Prostar GT and the Hummer H2. The Hummer is a four-door vehicle with seating for six passengers. As for the Prostar, the new model was introduced in the last version of the game. It is a sporty four-door sedan that is equipped with features such as a CD player, satellite radio, and a large trunk. Both the Prostar and the Hummer have been featured in real life and were even photographed by the press. In an interesting development, the GTA IV developers also announced that while the game will be sold for consoles, it will also be available for the PC. The reason behind the decision is so that the gamers will be able to run the game on their own computers. Search form Utility company criticized for criticizing state agencies On Tuesday, a state commission released a report stating that Michigan's investor-owned utilities have charged customers excessive prices for electricity. The Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) plans to recommend to the governor and legislature that utilities be held to a higher standard of affordability. It's no secret that we're in a recession. But at the same time, it's no secret that we're in a bad debt situation, a debt that includes the state's retirement and infrastructure costs and that's currently going out the door to support our state's public schools. Students from most universities and community colleges in Michigan can be considered for federal financial aid, whether or not they maintain a minimum standard of achievement on their high school diplomas. With education is all but certain to be an important part of the 2012 presidential election, it might be helpful 82157476af
