These are only the original, uncut manuals, don't crack, copy or share! - Leave my site if you don't agree with the following - Jiuntech.com - A .Q: Add content to Ember.View In my Ember.js application I'm trying to create a view which contains a header and a body, i.e.: What I would like to do is add additional content (e.g. a page-title, or a container with content and a background) to both the sidebar and the body - if I add the element directly to the body, it gets overwritten by the body content. The same for the sidebar. The best way I can think of so far, is to create a div element that should be placed on top of the sidebar, and then use Ember.TextArea to place the content in. Unfortunately, I'm not sure how to tie this into the sidebar's controller, since that is declared for a single view. Any suggestions? A: If you have an existing view, you could just set its content: `App.SidebarView = Ember.View.extend({ content: [], template: '#sidebar-template' }); App.BodyView = Ember.View.extend({ template: '#body-template' });` Then you could do: `App.SidebarView.appendContent({html: 'Example'})` `App.BodyView.appendContent({html: 'Can I be your friend?'})` Add the content to the main content placeholder. Afghan President Hamid Karzai says he will ask President Trump to send a larger number of troops to Afghanistan. During an interview with CBS News' "60 Minutes" aired Sunday, Karzai said he would like to see the U.S. deploy 20,000 additional troops to Afghanistan. That number is far smaller than the 36,000 troops requested by the U.S. military in February, a figure the U.S. military has since pledged to meet. But on Sunday, Karzai insisted the U.S. should go ahead 648931e174
